Attorneys for the Plaintiffs

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN FRANCISCO DIVISION

Honorable Vaughn R. Walker

INTRODUCTION

On April 17, 2009, the Court issued an order directing the parties to meet and confer regarding the entry of an appropriate protective order in this action concerning classified information and to either submit a stipulated order, or, if the parties are unable to agree on all terms, to jointly submit a document containing all agreed terms together with a document setting forth the terms about which they are unable to reach agreement and the respective positions of the parties with regard to each such term. See Order, April 17, 2009 (Dkt. 84 in 07-cv-109-VRW). The parties hereby submit this joint document pursuant to the Court's Order.

Part I sets forth plaintiffs' proposed protective order.

Part II sets forth the Government's opposition to the entry of a protective order under which the plaintiffs' counsel would have access to classified information and the Government's objections to plaintiffs' proposed protective order.

Part III sets forth plaintiffs' response to the Government's position.

I. PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED PROTECTIVE ORDER

Plaintiffs hereby propose the following protective order in response to the Court's April 17, 2009 Order:

[PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED] PROTECTIVE ORDER FOR USE BY PLAINTIFFS' COUNSEL OF TOP SECRET/SENSITIVE COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION

The Court finds that the above-captioned civil case involves national security information or documents, including TOP SECRET/SENSITIVE COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION ("TS/SCI"), the storage, handling, and control of which require special security precautions and access to which requires a security clearance and a "need to know." Accordingly, to protect the national security, and for good cause shown, the Court ORDERS that the following Protective Order shall apply in this litigation:

PROTECTIVE ORDER INVOLVING TOP SECRET/SENSITIVE COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION

A. Overview and Applicability

1. This Protective Order establishes procedures that must be followed by plaintiffs' counsel who, in connection with these matters, receive access to classified national security information or documents.
2. The procedures set forth in this Protective Order apply to all aspects of these matters and may be modified by further order of the Court upon its own motion or upon application by any party. The Court retains continuing jurisdiction to enforce or modify the terms of this Protective Order.
3. Nothing in this Protective Order precludes the government's use of classified information as otherwise authorized by law outside of these matters.
4. As appropriate and needed, plaintiffs' counsel are responsible for advising their employees, plaintiffs, and others of this Protective Order's contents.

B. Definitions

5. As used in this Protective Order, the words "documents" and "information" include, but are not limited to, all written or printed matter of any kind, formal or informal, including originals, conforming copies and non-conforming copies, whether different from the original by reason of notation made on such copies or otherwise, and further include, but are not limited to:
 - a. papers, correspondence, memoranda, notes, letters, reports, summaries, photographs, maps, charts, graphs, interoffice and intra-office communications, notations of any sort concerning conversations, meetings, or other communications, bulletins, teletypes, telegrams, facsimiles, invoices, worksheets, and drafts, alterations, modifications, changes, and amendments of any kind to the foregoing;

- b. graphic or oral records or representations of any kind, including, but not limited to, photographs, charts, graphs, microfiche, microfilm, videotapes, sound recordings of any kind, and motion pictures;
 - c. electronic, mechanical or electric records of any kind, including, but not limited to, tapes, cassettes, disks, recordings, electronic mail, films, typewriter ribbons, word processing or other computer tapes or disks, and all manner of electronic data processing storage; and
 - d. information acquired orally.
6. Unless otherwise stated, the terms “classified national security information and/or documents,” “classified information” and “classified documents” mean:
- a. any classified document or information that was classified by any Executive Branch agency in the interests of national security or pursuant to Executive Order, including Executive Order 12958, as amended, or its predecessor Orders, as “CONFIDENTIAL,” “SECRET,” or “TOP SECRET,” or additionally controlled as “SENSITIVE COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION (SCI)” or any classified information contained in such document;
 - b. any document or information, regardless of its physical form or characteristics, now or formerly in the possession of a private party that was derived from United States government information that was classified, regardless of whether such document or information has subsequently been classified by the government pursuant to Executive Order, including Executive Order 12958, as amended, or its predecessor Orders, as “CONFIDENTIAL,” “SECRET,” or “TOP SECRET,” or additionally controlled as “COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION (SCI)”;
 - c. verbal or non-documentary classified information known to plaintiffs or plaintiffs’ counsel; or
 - d. any document and information as to which plaintiffs or plaintiffs’ counsel were notified orally or in writing that such document or information contains classified information.
7. All classified documents, and information contained therein, shall remain classified unless the documents bear a clear indication that they were declassified by the agency or department that is the original classification authority of the document or the information contained therein (hereinafter, “original classification authority”).
8. As used in this Protective Order, the term “plaintiffs’ counsel” includes attorneys employed or retained by or on behalf of a plaintiff for purposes of representing the plaintiff in this litigation in federal court in the United States. Access to classified information by all persons mentioned in the foregoing sentence is governed by Section D of this Protective Order.
9. “Access to classified information” means having access to, reviewing, reading, learning, or otherwise coming to know in any manner any classified information.
10. “Secure area” means a physical facility accredited or approved for the storage, handling, and control of classified information.

- 1 11. “Unauthorized disclosure of classified information” means any knowing, willful, or 2 negligent action that could reasonably be expected to result in a communication or physical transfer of classified information to an unauthorized recipient.

3 C. Designation of Court Security Officer

- 4 12. The Court designates _____ as Court Security Officer for this case, and 5 _____, _____, and _____ as Alternate Court Security
6 Officers (collectively, “CSO”) for the purpose of providing security arrangements 7 necessary to protect against unauthorized disclosure of any classified documents or information to be made available in connection with this case. Plaintiffs’ counsel shall seek guidance from the CSO with regard to appropriate storage, handling, transmittal, and use of classified documents or information.

8 D. Access to Classified Information and Documents

- 9 13. Without authorization from the government, no plaintiffs’ counsel shall have access to 10 any classified information involved in this case unless that person has done the following:
- 11 a. received the necessary eligibility determination as determined by the Department 12 of Justice Security Officer; and
- 13 b. signed the Memorandum of Understanding (“MOU”), attached hereto as Exhibit A, agreeing to comply with the terms of this Protective Order.
- 14 14. Plaintiffs’ counsel to be provided access to classified information shall execute the MOU 15 appended to this Protective Order, and shall file executed originals of the MOU with the 16 Court and submit copies to the CSO and government counsel. Such execution, filing, and submission of the MOU is a condition precedent to a plaintiffs’ counsel having access to, or continued access to, classified information for the purposes of these proceedings.
- 17 15. The substitution, departure, or removal of any plaintiffs’ counsel from this case for any 18 reason shall not release that person from the provisions of this Protective Order or the MOU executed in connection with this Protective Order.
- 19 16. The government shall arrange for one appropriately approved secure area for plaintiffs’ 20 counsel’s use in San Francisco. The secure area shall contain a working area supplied 21 with secure office equipment reasonably necessary for preparing plaintiffs’ filings in this 22 case including but not limited to one computer with attached printer for each attorney who will be working in the secure area. The government shall bear expenses for the secure area and its equipment.
- 23 17. The CSO shall establish procedures to ensure that the secure area is accessible to 24 plaintiffs’ counsel during normal business hours and at other times on reasonable request 25 as approved by the CSO. The CSO shall establish procedures to ensure the secure area is 26 maintained and operated in the most efficient manner consistent with the protection of classified information. The CSO or CSO designee may place reasonable and necessary restrictions on the schedule of use of the secure area in order to accommodate appropriate access to all plaintiffs’ counsel in this case.
- 27 18. All classified information the government provides to plaintiffs’ counsel, and all classified information plaintiffs’ counsel otherwise possesses or maintains, shall be stored, maintained, and used only in the secure area.

19. No documents containing classified information may be removed from the secure area unless authorized by the CSO or CSO designee supervising the area.
20. Consistent with other provisions of this Protective Order, plaintiffs' counsel shall have access to the classified information made available to them in the secure area and shall be allowed to take notes and prepare documents with respect to those materials.
21. Plaintiffs' counsel shall not copy or reproduce any classified information in any form, except with the CSO's approval or in accordance with the procedures established by the CSO for the operation of the secure area.
22. All documents prepared by plaintiffs' counsel that contain or may contain classified information--including, without limitation, notes taken or memoranda prepared by counsel and pleadings or other documents intended for filing with the Court--shall be transcribed, recorded, typed, duplicated, copied, or otherwise prepared only by persons possessing an appropriate approval for access to classified information. Such activities shall take place in the secure area on approved word processing equipment and in accordance with the procedures approved by the CSO. All such documents and any associated materials containing classified information--such as notes, memoranda, drafts, copies, typewriter ribbons, magnetic recordings, and exhibits--shall be maintained in the secure area unless and until the CSO advises that those documents or associated materials are unclassified in their entirety. None of these materials shall be disclosed to government counsel unless authorized by the Court, by plaintiffs' counsel, or as otherwise provided in this Protective Order.
23. Plaintiffs' counsel may discuss the contents of classified information within the secure area or another area authorized by the CSO only. Plaintiffs' counsel shall not discuss the contents of classified information over any standard commercial telephone instrument or office intercommunication system and shall not transmit or discuss the contents of classified information in electronic mail communications of any kind.
24. The CSO or CSO designee shall not reveal to any person the content of any conversations he or she hears by or among plaintiffs' counsel, nor reveal the nature of documents being reviewed by them or the work generated by them, except as necessary to report violations of this Protective Order to the Court or to carry out their duties pursuant to this Protective Order. Additionally, the presence of the CSO or CSO designee shall not be construed to waive, limit, or otherwise render inapplicable the attorney-client privilege or work product protections.
25. A plaintiffs' counsel is presumed to have a "need to know" all the information in the government's possession concerning the plaintiffs whom that counsel represents. Government counsel may challenge the "need to know" presumption as to specific information on a case-by-case basis for good cause shown.
26. Plaintiffs' counsel shall not disclose the contents of any classified documents or information to any person, except those persons authorized by this Protective Order, the Court, and counsel for the government with the appropriate clearances and the need to know that information.
27. Except as otherwise provided herein, no plaintiffs' counsel shall disclose or cause to be disclosed any information known or believed to be classified in connection with any hearing or proceeding in this case.

1 28. Except as otherwise stated in this paragraph, and to ensure the security of the United 2 States of America, at no time, including any period subsequent to the conclusion of these 3 proceedings, shall plaintiffs' counsel make any public or private statements disclosing 4 any classified information or documents accessed pursuant to this Protective Order, 5 including the fact that any such information or documents are classified, but not 6 including the fact that the document plaintiffs filed with the original Complaint in this 7 case is classified. In the event, however, that classified information is no longer secret
8 within the meaning of Mohamed v. Jeppesen Dataplan, ____ F.3d ____, 2009 WL 1119516 (9th Cir. 2009), counsel are not precluded from making private or public statements about such information that is no longer secret, but only to the extent that the information is in fact no longer secret. Counsel shall not cause any classified information to become non-secret. As stated in paragraph 34 of this Protective Order, failure to comply with these rules may result in the revocation of counsel's security clearance as well as civil and criminal penalty.

9 29. All documents containing classified information prepared, possessed or maintained by, or 10 provided to, plaintiffs' counsel--except filings submitted to the Court and served on 11 government counsel--shall remain at all times in the CSO's control for the duration of 12 this case. Upon final resolution of this case, including all appeals, the CSO shall destroy 13 all such documents, except that government counsel shall retain one complete set of any 14 such materials that were presented in any form to the Court. Any such retained materials shall be placed in an envelope or envelopes marked "Classified Information Subject to Protective Order." In any subsequent or collateral proceeding, a party may seek discovery of such materials from the government, without prejudice to the government's right to oppose such discovery.

14 E. Procedures for Filing Documents

15 30. Unclassified Filing by Plaintiffs. Pending further order of the Court, any pleading or 16 other document filed by plaintiffs that plaintiffs' counsel do not believe contains 17 classified information and have no reason to believe contains classified information is authorized for direct filing in the CM/ECF system consistent with the regular electronic filing practices of this Court.

18 31. Classified Filings by Plaintiffs. Any pleading or other document filed by plaintiffs that 19 plaintiffs' counsel know, have reason to believe, or are uncertain whether it contains 20 classified information, shall be filed, along with three copies, under seal with the CSO on 21 weekdays between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. PST. Such document must be marked with 22 the appropriate classification marking (e.g., "TOP SECRET/SENSITIVE 23 COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION"). The time of physical submission to the CSO shall be considered the date and time of filing. At the time of making a submission to the CSO, plaintiffs' counsel shall file on the public record in the CM/ECF system a "Notice of Filing," notifying the Court that the submission was made to the CSO and specifying in general terms the nature of the filing without disclosing any potentially classified information.

24 a. Upon receipt, the CSO will deliver to the Court and government counsel any 25 pleading or other document plaintiffs filed that may contain classified 26 information. The CSO will forward the document to the appropriate government 27 agencies and departments for their determination as to whether the pleading or other document contains classified information. To facilitate this review, plaintiffs' counsel shall identify each paragraph of a document that counsel believe may contain classified information by marking each paragraph with an appropriate classification marking or otherwise specifically identifying such paragraphs. If, following review by the appropriate government agencies and departments, it is determined that the pleading or other document contains classified information, the CSO must ensure that the document is marked with the appropriate classification marking and that the document remains under seal. The CSO will work with the appropriate government agencies or departments to prepare a redacted version of the pleading or other document appropriate for filing on the public record. Counsel shall then file the redacted version of the document in the CM/ECF system with a notation in the upper right hand corner of the first page stating "REDACTED VERSION FOR PUBLIC FILING CLEARED BY CSO." The docket entry description in the CM/ECF system for the document suitable for public viewing shall make specific reference to the earlier docket entry notifying the Court that the document was submitted to the CSO for review.

- b. In the event an entire document is deemed classified, plaintiffs' counsel shall file notice in the CM/ECF system listing the caption of the case, a version of the title of the document that does not disclose classified information, and a brief statement that the CSO informed counsel that the entire document is classified. The docket entry description in the CM/ECF system for the document suitable for public viewing shall make specific reference to the earlier docket entry notifying the Court that the document was submitted to the CSO for review.
- c. If it is determined that the pleading or other document does not contain classified information, counsel shall file the full submission in the CM/ECF system and make specific reference to the earlier docket entry notifying the Court that the document was submitted to the CSO for review. The docket entry description shall also state that the CSO approved public filing of the document. The underlying document filed in the CM/ECF system shall contain a notation in the upper right hand corner of the first page stating "PREVIOUSLY FILED WITH CSO AND CLEARED FOR PUBLIC FILING."

32. Classified Filings by Defendants.

- a. Any pleading or other document filed by defendants' counsel containing classified information shall be filed, along with three copies, under seal with the Court through the CSO on weekdays between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. PST. The time of physical submission to the CSO shall be considered the date and time of filing. The CSO shall serve a copy of any classified pleading or document on plaintiffs' counsel at the secure facility. At the time of making a submission to the CSO, defendants shall file on the public record in the CM/ECF system a "Notice of Filing," notifying the Court that a submission was made to the CSO and specifying in general terms the nature of the filing without disclosing any potentially classified information. As soon as practicable following the original filing date, defendants' counsel shall file in the CM/ECF system a version of the pleading or document appropriate for filing on the public record, consistent with the procedures outlined in paragraphs 31.a-c of this Protective Order.
- b. Plaintiffs' counsel shall be given notice of any classified filing by defendants, and shall be allowed to review such filings in the secure room described in paragraph 16.

33. Disclosure of Classified Information on the Public Record. In the event defendants believe that a party has disclosed classified information on the public docket, defendants shall notify the CSO, who shall work with the Clerk's Office to remove the filing from the public docket. A copy of the filing shall then be lodged with the CSO and treated

1 according to paragraphs 31.b or 31.c of this Protective Order. Nothing herein limits the 2 government's authority to take necessary remedial action to ensure the protection of the 3 classified information.

4 F. Penalties for Unauthorized Disclosure

- 5 34. Any unauthorized disclosure of classified information may constitute violations of United 6 States criminal laws. Additionally, any violation of the terms of this Protective Order 7 shall be immediately brought to the attention of the Court and may result in a charge of 8 contempt of Court and possible referral for criminal prosecution. See, e.g., Executive 9 Order 12958, as amended. Any breach of this Protective Order may also result in the 10 termination of access to classified information. Persons subject to this Protective Order 11 are advised that direct or indirect unauthorized disclosure, retention, or negligent 12 handling of classified documents or information could cause damage to the national 13 security of the United States or may be used to the advantage of an adversary of the 14 United States or against the interests of the United States. This Protective Order is to 15 ensure that those authorized to receive classified information will not divulge this 16 information to anyone who is not authorized to receive it without prior written 17 authorization from the original classification authority and in conformity with this 18 Protective Order.
- 19 35. The termination of these proceedings shall not relieve any person or party provided 20 classified information of his, her, or its obligations under this Protective Order.

21 G. Discovery and Expert Witnesses

- 22 36. Plaintiffs's counsel anticipate that, at some future point in this litigation, they might wish 23 to conduct discovery that could require production or disclosure of classified information 24 to plaintiffs, and/or that they might wish to employ an expert or experts with whom 25 plaintiffs might need to discuss classified information. This Protective Order in its 26 present form does not address procedures that must be followed for such discovery and/or 27 employment of experts. Such procedures will be addressed by amendment to this 28 Protective Order if and when the need arises.

SO ORDERED.

II. GOVERNMENT DEFENDANTS' OPPOSITION TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY

The Government recognizes that the Court seeks its consent to procedures whereby both parties would have access to classified information in order to litigate this case. However, the Government must respectfully advise the Court that it remains in fundamental disagreement with this approach and, thus, does not consent to a protective order under which plaintiffs' counsel are granted access to classified information. Such an order would be improper in this case for several reasons, as detailed below. In particular, the Government disagrees with the Court's holding that our successful state secrets privilege assertion in this case—which would otherwise now require dismissal—is preempted by Section 106(f) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, 50 U.S.C. § 1806(f) (hereafter "Section 1806(f)"), and thus we object to any disclosure to plaintiffs' counsel that would vitiate the privilege assertion before an opportunity to appeal. In addition, the Director of the National Security Agency ("NSA") has specifically determined that plaintiffs' counsel do not have a "need to know" classified information under the terms of Executive Orders governing classified information, and are therefore not entitled to have access to such information at issue in this case. See Declaration of Ariane E. Cerlenko, National Security Agency (Dkt. 60-2); Exec. Ord. 12,958, §§ 4.1(a), 60 Fed. Reg. 19825 (Apr. 17, 1995), as amended by Exec. Ord. 13,292, 68 Fed. Reg. 15315 (Mar. 25, 2003) (hereafter "Exec. Ord. 13,202").

As noted below, the Government has asked the Court to certify for immediate review its prior rulings finding that the state secrets privilege is preempted and that due process requires that plaintiffs' counsel have access to classified information. See Dkts. 60, 70. The Court did not certify these significant issues for further review, but has thus far refrained from ordering the disclosure of classified information to the plaintiffs' counsel over the Government's objection. While the Court of Appeals determined that this Court's Order of January 5, 2009 (Dkt. 57) was not appealable, the Government submits that an order that

1 classified information be disclosed to plaintiffs' counsel or an actual disclosure would be 2 appealable pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1291 and/or 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1). The Government is 3 of the view that the most appropriate way forward is to resolve the issue of whether the law 4 entitles plaintiffs' counsel to receive access to classified information in this case before any 5 disclosure.

6 The Government has made several attempts to resolve this dispute in an orderly 7 fashion, and regrets that it is not in a position to consent to how the Court wishes to proceed 8 at this stage. But the Government submits that granting plaintiffs' counsel access to 9 classified information in the circumstances of this case would be unsupported by law and 10 should be subject to appellate review prior to any disclosure. This dispute is of 11 extraordinary constitutional significance—concerning whether the Executive's successful 12 assertion of privilege to protect state secrets has been preempted, and whether the disclosure 13 of that very information should now occur over the Government's objection. The 14 Government believes that such a course would be profoundly in error, and thus it cannot 15 consent to a protective order under which such disclosures would be authorized or 16 facilitated.

17 In response to the Court's April 17 Order, the Government has conferred with 18 plaintiffs' counsel concerning its position at this stage, as well as concerning the terms of 19 plaintiffs' proposed protective order. The Government has set forth below its objection to 20 plaintiffs' proposed order. That proposed order is modeled on—but crucially different 21 from—the protective orders entered in the Guantanamo Bay habeas litigation. Not only are 22 the circumstances of those cases significantly different from this one, but plaintiffs have 23 excluded from their proposed order key provisions of the Guantanamo order that reserve the 24 Government's control over access to classified information. Plaintiffs' counsel would thus 25 grant themselves far greater access than the Guantanamo habeas petitioners' counsel. The 26 Government recognizes that, should the courts ultimately rule on appeal that the state 27 secrets privilege is preempted in this case and plaintiffs' counsel receive access to classified 28

1 information over the Government's objection, specific security procedures governing such 2 access would be required. But, for the reasons set forth below, the entry of plaintiffs' 3 proposed protective order in this case would be improper as a matter of law.

4 BACKGROUND

5 Plaintiffs in this action allege that they were subject to unlawful warrantless 6 surveillance in 2004 under the "Terrorist Surveillance Program" ("TSP"). The Court of 7 Appeals for the Ninth Circuit upheld the Government's "exceptionally well-documented" 8 state secrets privilege assertion concerning whether plaintiffs have been subject to the 9 alleged surveillance, specifically excluded from this case the use of a classified document 10 that had been inadvertently disclosed to the plaintiffs, and held that, without the privileged 11 evidence, plaintiffs could not establish their standing. See Al-Haramain Islamic Found. v.
12 Bush, 507 F.3d 1190, 1201-05 (9th Cir. 2007). The Ninth Circuit remanded the case for a 13 determination of whether the Government's privilege assertion is preempted by Section 14 1806(f) of the FISA. Id. at 1205-06. On remand, this Court concluded that Section 1806 15 preempts the state secrets privilege, that the case should now proceed under those 16 procedures, and that due process requires that both parties have access to classified 17 information in order to litigate the case under Section 1806(f). See In re: Nat'l Security
18 Agency Telecomm. Records Litig., Al-Haramain Islamic Found. v. Bush, 564 F. Supp. 2d 19 1109, 1115-25 (N.D. Cal. July 2, 2008) and Al-Haramain Islamic Found. v. Bush, 595 F.
20 Supp. 2d 1077, 1089 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2009). The Court directed the Government to 21 arrange for three of plaintiffs' counsel to apply for security clearances and that their 22 applications be processed expeditiously. See 595 F. Supp. 2d at 1089-90.

23 The Government appealed the Court's January 5 Order (see Dkt. 59) and also 24 requested a stay of that Order pending appeal and certification of the Order for interlocutory 25 review under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). See Dkts 60, 70. The Government advised the Court 26 that the NSA Director has determined subsequent to the Court's January 5 Order that, under 27 applicable executive orders, neither plaintiffs nor their counsel have a need for access to 28

1 classified NSA information that has been (or would be) excluded under the state secrets 2 privilege assertion, and we urged that any disclosure of classified information not occur 3 prior to appellate review. See Dkt. 60 at 11-14; Declaration of Ariane E. Cerlenko, National 4 Security Agency (Dkt. 60-2) ¶ 9. By Order dated February 13, 2009, the Court denied the 5 Government's motion to certify its January 5 Order and stated that it "seeks from the 6 government implementation of the steps necessary to afford that both parties have access to 7 the material upon which the court makes a decision." See Dkt. 71 at 3 (internal quotation 8 omitted). The Court added that this "is the procedure the January 5 order seeks to put in 9 place," and directed the Government to inform the Court by February 27, 2009, how it 10 intends to comply with the January 5 Order. Id.

11 On February 27, 2009, the Court of Appeals dismissed the Government's appeal of 12 the January 5 Order for lack of jurisdiction. See Dkt. 83. Also on February 27, 2009, the 13 Government again advised the Court that it continued to oppose the disclosure of classified 14 information to plaintiffs' counsel in further proceedings under Section 1806(f) and 15 requested that, if the Court were to order any disclosure, proceedings be stayed pending 16 appeal of any such further order. See Dkt. 77.

17 The Court's most recent order directed the parties "to meet and confer regarding the 18 entry of an appropriate protective order which shall be entered herein before the court rules 19 on the merits." April 17, 2009 Order (Dkt. 84) at 2. The Court further ordered the parties 20 to:

21 [S]ubmit to the court a stipulated protective order. . . . If the

3 DISCUSSION

4 I. The Law Does Not Support Disclosure Pursuant to a Protective Order of 5 Classified Information That Has Been Properly Protected by the State
6 Secrets Privilege.

7 The protective order plaintiffs seek would be unprecedented in a case such as this, 8 for several reasons. First, as a general matter, the authority to determine who may have 9 access to classified information "is committed by law to the appropriate agency of the 10 Executive Branch." See Department of the Navy v. Egan, 484 U.S. 518, 527 (1988); 11 Dorfmont v. Brown, 913 F.2d 1399, 1401 (9th Cir. 1990). As the Government has 12 previously advised the Court, the grant of a security clearance requires more than a 13 favorable determination that an individual is trustworthy for access to classified 14 information. Only where an agency official with appropriate authority separately concludes 15 that an individual has a demonstrated "need to know" classified information in connection 16 with the performance of a "governmental function" that is "lawful and authorized" by the 17 agency will a person be given access to classified information. See Dkt. 60 (Defendants' 18 Motion for a Stay Pending Appeal) at 12-13 (citing Exec. Ord. 12,958, §§ 4.1(a), 4.2(a), 19 5.4(d)(5), 6.1(z), 60 Fed. Reg. 19825 (Apr. 17, 1995), as amended by Exec. Ord. 13,292, 68 20 Fed. Reg. 15315 (Mar. 25, 2003)). In this case, the NSA Director has determined that 21 plaintiffs' counsel do not have a need to know classified information in this case and may 22 not have access to that information. See Cerlenko Declaration (Dkt. 60-2). Thus, no 23 protective order is appropriate to the extent it authorizes or facilitates access by plaintiffs' 24 counsel to classified information. Here, however, paragraph 25 of the plaintiffs' proposed 25 protective order would expressly overrule the NSA Director's determination, and find that 26 the plaintiffs' counsel have a "presumed" need to know classified information. See Pls.
27 Proposed Order ¶ 25. Similarly, paragraph 13 of the proposed protective order would 28 authorize access by plaintiffs' counsel to classified information based on having obtained

1 the necessary “eligibility determination” by Department of Justice Security Officers. See id.
2 ¶ 13.^{1/} But such a determination is not a “security clearance” absent a “need to know” 3 determination by the Executive Branch, which has been denied in this case. Among the 4 fundamental issues in dispute in this case is whether the Court has authority to supercede
5 that determination, as the plaintiffs’ proposed order would now permit. The Government 6 does not consent to a protective order that would grant access to classified information over 7 its objection and abrogate both the Government’s state secrets privilege and need to know 8 determination.

9 Second, the Government submits that the Court lacks authority to disclose over the 10 Government’s objection information subject to the state secrets privilege in ordinary civil 11 litigation where the Government is a defendant. Indeed, in similar circumstances, courts 12 have repeatedly held that private parties and counsel are not entitled to access classified 13 information.^{2/} The entry of a protective order granting plaintiffs’ counsel access to state 14 secrets in this case would be contrary to this authority and would vitiate the state secrets 15 privilege—the very purpose of which is to prevent such disclosures by “allowing the 16 government to deny discovery of military secrets.” Kasza v. Browner, 133 F.3d 1159, 1165 17 (9th Cir. 1998). Accordingly, the disclosure of state secrets even under purportedly secure 18

19 ¹ The proposed order would also require any recipient of classified information to sign a 20 Memorandum of Understanding. See Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 13. Unless expressly based on a 21 need to know determination by the Executive Branch, the proposed MOU cannot authorize the disclosure of classified information to any signatory and therefore is improper as a matter of law.

22 ² See e.g. Sterling v. Tenet, 416 F.3d 338, 348 (4th Cir. 2005) (denying private counsel 23 access to classified information in states secrets case); Ellsberg v. Mitchell, 709 F.2d 51, 61 24 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (explaining that the rule denying counsel access to classified information is 25 “well settled” and that “our nation’s security is too important to be entrusted to the good faith 26 and circumspection of a litigant’s lawyer . . . or to the coercive power of a protective order.”); 27 Halkin v. Helms, 598 F.2d 1, 7 (D.C. Cir. 1978) (rejecting argument that counsel should have 28 been permitted to participate in the in camera proceedings); see also Stillman v. Central Intelligence Agency, 319 F.3d 546, 548 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (holding that district court abused its discretion in finding First Amendment right for plaintiffs’ attorney to receive access to classified information to assist the court in resolving the plaintiff’s challenge to pre-publication classification review).

1 procedures would still be improper as a matter of law, because such an order would 2 authorize or facilitate the disclosure of classified information to a party where the 3 Government has determined that there should be no disclosure.^{3/}

4 The Government recognizes that this Court disagrees with its position and has held 5 that FISA Section 1806 preempts the state secrets privilege and provides authority for the 6 disclosure of classified information in this case. But the Government respectfully maintains 7 its position, explained at length in previous filings,^{4/} that the Court's prior rulings are in 8 error and should be reviewed before any disclosures occur that would actually negate that 9 privilege assertion. In sum, Section 1806 neither expressly preempts the state secrets 10 privilege nor applies in the circumstances of this case to authorize a court to disclose 11 classified information to a party seeking to discover whether they have been subject to 12 alleged surveillance. Section 1806(f) applies where the Government has acknowledged 13 surveillance and where the use of surveillance evidence against a party is at issue. See 50 14 U.S.C. § 1806(c), (d), (e), (f). Notably, in enacting Section 1806(f), Congress made clear 15 that where a court orders disclosure of surveillance materials in the circumstances where 16 Section 1806(f) does apply, the government has a choice to "either disclose the material or 17 forgo use of the surveillance-based evidence" (the latter possibly resulting in dismissal of 18 the prosecution). See S. Rep. No. 95-701, 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 3973, 4034); see also In re 19 Sealed Case, 310 F.3d 717, 741 (For. Intel. Surv. Ct. Rev. 2002) (holding that the 20 Government is required to notify a defendant that surveillance has occurred only if the 21 Government intends to use surveillance evidence in a criminal case); Cf. Alderman v. United 22 States, 394 U.S. 181-82, 184 (1969) (recognizing the Government's option to disclose

23 ³ Indeed, as we have previously advised the Court, where the very threshold issue of 24 whether the plaintiffs have been subject to alleged surveillance and thus would have standing has 25 been properly protected under the state secrets privilege, any attempt to proceed under 26 purportedly secure procedures would not only require the disclosure of state secrets directly to 27 the plaintiffs' counsel, but would also risk public disclosure of state secrets because further 28 proceedings would inherently reveal whether or not standing exists.

⁴ See Dkt. 17 at 8-25; Dkt. 29 at 8-24; Dkt. 51 at 3-14; 19-24 (Government's prior briefs opposing application of Section 1806(f) issue in this case).

1 surveillance evidence or dismiss the case).^{5/} In addition, so far as the Government is aware,
2 even where Section 1806(f) properly applies, no court has ever used that provision to order 3 the disclosure of surveillance materials to a private party seeking discovery of that 4 information. See In Re: Grand Jury Proceedings of the Special April 2002 Grand Jury, 347
5 F.3d 197, 203 (7th Cir. 2003); United States v. Warsame, 547 F. Supp. 2d 982, 987 (D.
6 Minn. 2008); United States v. Rosen, 447 F. Supp. 2d 538, 546 (E.D. Va. 2006) (collecting 7 cases).

8 Plaintiffs' proposed protective order disregards the parties' fundamental dispute over 9 whether plaintiffs' counsel have a "need to know" classified information, and thus may have 10 access to classified information, and presumes that Section 1806(f) authorizes the disclosure 11 of properly protected state secrets through a protective order in an ordinary civil lawsuit in 12 which the Government is named as defendant. The proposed protective order would remove 13 control over classified information from the Executive Branch in a manner that has no 14 precedent or statutory support in the circumstances of this case, through ad hoc procedures, 15 whereby the Government would have no option to withdraw evidence or cause the action to 16 be dismissed in order to avoid disclosure. The Government cannot consent to such a 17 process.

18 Moreover, the law is clear that any order providing for the disclosure of state secrets 19 should be subject to immediate appellate review. As the Ninth Circuit has explained, 20 "[s]ecrecy is a one-way street: Once information is published [or disclosed], it cannot be 21 made secret again," and thus an order of disclosure is "effectively unreviewable on appeal 22

23 ⁵ The Supreme Court has recognized the key difference between civil litigation and 24 criminal prosecutions, where the Government may, as a last resort, choose to withdraw evidence, 25 dismiss charges, or dismiss an indictment rather than disclose classified information. In such 26 cases, as the Supreme Court recognized in United States v. Reynolds, 345 U.S. 1 (1953), "the 27 Government can invoke its evidentiary privileges only at the price of letting the defendant go 28 free." Id. at 12; see also 18 U.S.C. App. 3 § 7(a), 6(e) (CIPA provisions stating that if a court orders disclosure of classified information in a criminal case, the Government may seek an interlocutory appeal, or cause the court to dismiss the indictment). In contrast, the Reynolds Court noted that this principle "has no application in a civil forum where the Government is not the moving party, but is a defendant only on terms to which it has consented." 345 U.S. at 12.

1 from a final judgment.” In re Copley Press, 518 F.3d 1022, 1025 (9th Cir. 2008); see also 2 Admiral Ins. Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court, 881 F.2d 1486, 1491 (9th Cir. 1989) (“[A]ppeal after 3 disclosure of the privileged communication [or information] is an inadequate remedy”).
4 Indeed, the very statute under which plaintiffs and the Court wish to proceed—Section 5 1806—provides that any order from a district court requiring disclosure of “materials 6 relating to a surveillance” is a final order, which would be subject to appeal. See 50 U.S.C.
7 § 1806(h); United States v. Hamide, 914 F.2d 1147, 1151 (9th Cir. 1990). The Classified 8 Information Procedures Act similarly provides for interlocutory appeal from any order of “a 9 district court in a criminal case authorizing the disclosure of classified information. . . .” 18 10 U.S.C. App. 3 § 7(a); see also 18 U.S.C. § 2339B(f)(1), (5) (authorizing interlocutory 11 appeal by the United States from any district court order “authorizing the disclosure of 12 classified information” in a civil proceeding brought by the United States pursuant to the 13 material support statute). Thus, what the Government seeks at this stage is consistent with 14 well-established law that appellate review occur before any disclosures of classified 15 information over the Government’s objection.

16 Accordingly, the Government respectfully requests that, before the Court grants 17 plaintiffs’ counsel access to state secrets, the Court enter an order directing disclosure or 18 otherwise provide adequate notice of any disclosure to enable the Government to seek a stay 19 and take an appeal. During the conferral process, plaintiffs rejected this approach and, 20 indeed, take the position below that the Court may simply disclose classified information to 21 plaintiffs’ counsel under a protective order without regard to the Government’s objection—22 a contention that underscores our objection to the proposed order. Plaintiffs’ also contend 23 that a disclosure pursuant to the proposed order would not be appealable. The Government 24 disagrees and requests advance notice of any order or action to disclose classified 25 information to plaintiffs’ counsel in order to protect the Government’s interests at stake.
26 Similarly, if the Court believes that the protective order itself constitutes an order directing 27 or authorizing that classified information be disclosed to the plaintiffs’ counsel over the 28 Government’s objection, it should make that explicit.

1 II. Application of Selective Portions of Protective Orders Entered in the 2 Guantanamo Habeas Litigation Would Be Improper in This Case.

3 Plaintiffs model their proposed protective order on the protective order in the 4 Guantanamo habeas litigation, but disregard the circumstances of that case and omit the 5 most important provisions of the Guantanamo order that preserve the fundamental principle 6 that the Government controls classified information. Nothing in the Guantanamo order 7 requires the Government to disclose classified information; nothing entitles petitioners' to 8 access information filed ex parte or in camera; and disclosure in the Guantanamo cases may 9 be avoided where the Government determines to withdraw allegations or release a detainee.
10 Plaintiffs ask the Court to abandon each of these limitations and seek unprecedented access 11 to classified information in this case.

12 The unique procedures governing the Guantanamo habeas cases, where courts must 13 adjudicate the Government's authority to detain individuals, are inapplicable here. In the 14 Guantanamo litigation, the Government consented to a protective order in part because of 15 the detainees' liberty interests at stake, in part to regulate access to sensitive information by 16 detainee counsel—including information known by the detainees themselves—and in part to 17 facilitate access to the secure Guantanamo Bay facility. There is no parallel in this case to 18 the substantive issues raised by the Guantanamo litigation—in which the Government 19 asserts authority to detain someone and the need to protect against disclosure of information 20 by suspected terrorists—nor practical issues concerning access to a secure military facility.
21 Thus, the central reasons that the Government agreed to grant security clearances and access 22 to some classified information to private counsel in Guantanamo habeas cases are not 23 applicable here, and the terms of those orders are not appropriate here.

24 Plaintiffs not only misapply the Guantanamo order to this case, they seek to give 25 themselves far greater access to classified information than afforded the detainees' counsel 26 in the Guantanamo cases. For example, plaintiffs' proposed order omits ¶ 49(b) of the 27 Guantanamo order, which states first that: "Nothing herein requires the government to 28 disclose classified information." See In re: Guantanamo Bay Detainee Litig., No. 08-0442

1 (Dkt. 1481) § 49(b) (D.D.C. Sept. 11, 2008). Here, of course, the very objective of the 2 proposed order is to require the disclosure of classified information over the Government's 3 objection. Elimination of the Government's discretion to control whether classified 4 information is disclosed is the central issue in dispute in this case, and the Government
5 cannot consent to any protective order that does so. Plaintiffs' proposed order also deletes 6 another sentence from paragraph 49(b) of the Guantanamo order which states that: 7 "Nothing herein prohibits the government from submitting classified information to the 8 Court in camera or ex parte in these proceedings or entitles petitioners or petitioners' 9 counsel access to such submissions or information." See id. Elimination of this provision 10 would further foreclose the Government's authority to control the use and disclosure of 11 classified information in this case. Moreover, the Government objects to the extent the 12 proposed order, by omitting this provision, would permit plaintiffs' counsel access to any 13 information in the Government's prior classified filings submitted solely for ex parte, in 14 camera review.

15 Plaintiffs candidly conceded during the conferral process that they intend to grant 16 themselves a greater right to classified information than counsel for the Guantanamo habeas 17 petitioners. Plaintiffs also contend below that the elimination of the aforementioned 18 provisions is consistent with the Court's prior orders that due process requires their access 19 to classified information. But that simply illustrates the need for further review of the 20 current dispute before any disclosure of classified information over the Government's 21 objection.

22 Similarly, paragraph 25 of plaintiffs' proposed protective order, which addresses 23 counsel's "need to know" classified information, is also fundamentally flawed. This 24 proposed provision states: "A plaintiff's counsel is presumed to have a 'need to know' all 25 the information in the government's possession concerning the plaintiffs whom that counsel 26 represents." See Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 25. Not only is this among the central issues in 27 dispute in this case, as noted above, but, under this provision, plaintiffs would be presumed 28

1 to have a “need to know” any and all classified information “concerning” plaintiffs. This 2 could include all information concerning the Al-Haramain Islamic Foundation of 3 Oregon—a designated global terrorist organization—as well as the information at issue in 4 the Government’s state secrets privilege assertion filed in this case, to the extent those 5 submissions are deemed to “concern” the plaintiffs.^{6/} Plaintiffs would thus transform the 6 inadvertent disclosure of a single document—which itself was subsequently excluded in this 7 case by the Ninth Circuit—into a presumption entitling them to all information that may 8 exist concerning them. Plaintiffs’ response below does not recede from this sweeping 9 demand for access.

10 Moreover, plaintiffs again have deleted a key sentence from the need-to-know 11 provision of the Guantanamo order: “This presumption [of a need to know] is overcome to 12 the extent the government seeks to withhold from a [plaintiff’s] counsel highly sensitive 13 information or information concerning a highly sensitive source that the government 14 presents to the Court ex parte and in camera.” In re: Guantanamo Bay Detainee Litigation, 15 No. 08-0442 (Dkt. 1481) ¶ 28. Instead, plaintiffs’ proposed order would require the 16 Government to petition the Court to decide that plaintiffs lack a “need to know” any 17 particularly sensitive information. See Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 25. That alternative still 18 would leave the access determination to the Court, not the Executive Branch, and would 19 entail extensive and unnecessary litigation over particular disclosures where the 20 Government objects to any disclosure of state secrets to plaintiffs’ counsel.^{7/}

21
22 ⁶ The Government’s state secrets privilege assertion applies to a range of information 23 beyond the sealed document, including whether or not the plaintiffs were subject to alleged 24 surveillance not only on the Terrorist Surveillance Program challenged in this case, but pursuant 25 to any other authority not at issue here, as well as information concerning the TSP, and the al 26 Qaeda threat. See Public Declaration of John D. Negroponte ¶ 11 (filed on June 21, 2006) (Dkt.
27 No. 59, Item #1) (Civ. 06-274-KI) (D. Or)).

28 ⁷ Moreover, a presumption that counsel have a need to know classified information is particularly inappropriate in a case involving information classified as TOP SECRET/SENSITIVE COMPARTMENTED INFORMATION, the unauthorized disclosure of which reasonably can be expected to cause “exceptionally grave damage to the national security.” See Exec. Order 13,292 § 1.2(a)(1). Such a designation applies where the threat to specific

1 In sum, the Government objects to plaintiffs’ proposed protective order for several 2 fundamental reasons. First, the proposed order presumes that plaintiffs’ counsel are entitled 3 to access classified information under the law, which they are not. Second, the proposed 4 order omits key provisions of the Guantanamo protective order that would reserve the 5 Executive Branch’s authority to control access to classified information. Third, the 6 proposed order contains no allowance for the Government to withdraw evidence in order to 7 protect intelligence sources and methods and face the consequences of that decision in the 8 litigation, as it can in the Guantanamo habeas cases, under CIPA, and under Section 1806(f) 9 itself. Fourth, the proposed order contains no procedures that would provide for notice of 10 and an opportunity to appeal any order or action under which classified information would 11 be disclosed to the plaintiffs’ counsel.

12 As directed by the Court’s April 17 Order, the Government has advised the plaintiffs 13 of the foregoing objections to the entry of a protective order, but the parties have been 14 unable to reach agreement on resolving these significant issues in dispute. As noted above, 15 plaintiffs declined to agree to any appellate review of the access issue at this stage, declined 16 to delete the provision stating that they have a presumptive need to know classified 17 information at issue, and declined to reinsert provisions deleted from the Guantanamo order 18 providing for the Government’s ability to control the disclosure of classified information 19 and protect information submitted solely for ex parte review.

20 Related to the foregoing, the Government has other objections to plaintiffs’ proposed 21 order. For example, plaintiffs’ proposed order would link the determination of what 22 information is “not a secret” to the process described in Mohamed v. Jeppesen Dataplan, 23 ___ F.3d ___, 2009 WL 1119516, (9th Cir. 2009), concerning adjudication of the state 24 secrets privilege. See Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 28. But this approach makes little sense, not 25

26 information is “exceptional” and the normal criteria for classification are insufficient to protect 27 the program, see id. § 4.3(a). In this context, the need-to-know requirement is strictly enforced, 28 and even Government employees who hold the appropriate security clearances are not provided with access to compartmented information unless absolutely necessary, based on a demonstrated —not a presumed—need to know.

1 only because Jeppesen may be subject to further review, but because the Government's state
2 secrets privilege assertion in this case has already been upheld. The question of what is "a 3 secret" for purposes of the state secrets at issue in this case has been resolved by the Ninth 4 Circuit's decision in Al-Haramain.^{8/}

5 In addition, plaintiffs' proposed order would allow the plaintiffs' counsel to file 6 information on the public record that they "do not believe" contain classified information, 7 and would subject a filing to classification review only if plaintiffs' counsel know, or have 8 reason to believe, or are uncertain whether it may contain classified information. See Pls.
9 Proposed Order ¶¶ 30, 31. Particularly where the Government does not control the 10 disclosure of classified information in the first place, these procedures would leave to 11 plaintiffs' counsel—not the Government—the judgment of what may or may not be 12 classified and filed on the public record before review by Government classification 13 officials. What may appear "obvious" to plaintiffs based on classification markings, see 14 Plaintiffs' Response infra, is not their determination to make. This further loss of control 15 over the potential disclosure of classified information on the public record underscores the 16 serious risk of harm to national security posed by the proposed order absent an immediate 17 opportunity to appeal whether there should be any disclosures in this case. Efforts to rectify 18 improper disclosures on the public records after the fact, see Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 33, are 19 inadequate, particularly where the Government does not control the need to know 20 determination or what classified information may be disclosed to plaintiffs' counsel under 21 the proposed order. Plaintiffs' proposed modification to paragraph 30 (see infra) hardly 22 changes the provision and does not adequately address the Government's concern.

23 Plaintiffs' proposed order also includes requirements for providing access to secure 24 facilities, computers, and printers, and for the supervision of the plaintiffs' activities in 25 secure facilities by court security officers. See Pls. Proposed Order ¶¶ 16-23. The 26

27 ⁸ Accordingly, the Government also objects to the reference to and incorporation of legal 28 determinations within the meaning of the Jeppesen decision in the plaintiffs' proposed MOU.
See Pls. Proposed Memorandum of Understanding.

1 Government objects to the entry of such procedures at this stage, not only because access to 2 classified information by plaintiffs' counsel in the circumstances of this case is unsupported 3 by law, but also because these important logistical issues, costs, and burdens should be 4 addressed only after the access issue is finally resolved.

5 For example, one provision of the proposed order states that, "[c]onsistent with the 6 other provisions of this Protective Order, plaintiffs' counsel "shall have access to the 7 classified information made available to them in the secure area and shall be allowed to take 8 notes and prepare documents with respect to those materials." See Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 9 20. But because the "other provisions" of the order eliminate the Government's control 10 over what classified information may be made available to the plaintiffs, this seemingly 11 "procedural" requirement could authorize unfettered and continuous access by plaintiffs to a 12 range of classified information outside of the Executive Branch's control. The adequacy of 13 specific security measures depends on whether and to what extent access to particular 14 information is ultimately allowed, and should not be decided in a vacuum beforehand.
15 Plaintiffs' rejected the Government's request to defer these issues until the access issue was 16 resolved.⁹

17 While plaintiffs have addressed objections raised by the Government to other 18 provisions of their proposed order (and to the extent some other objections may be 19 resolved), the Government must emphasize that it opposes the entry of a protective order 20 permitting or facilitating access to classified information by plaintiffs' counsel absent a final 21

22 ⁹ The Government objects to other logistical procedures in the proposed order. The order 23 prohibits plaintiffs' counsel from removing documents containing classified information from 24 the secure area unless approved by the Court Security Officer. Pls. Proposed Order ¶ 19. But 25 any determination to remove classified information from a secure setting would also require 26 approval by the Executive Branch agency that controls the information. Paragraph 29 of the 27 proposed order appears to contemplate that classified filings with the Court would not remain in 28 the custody of CSOs, and provides for the destruction of documents after the conclusion of proceedings. See id. ¶ 29. The Executive Branch agency with authority over any classified information at issue in this case controls the location, security, and proper disposition or retention of classified information submitted to the Court—both during and after the termination of litigation.

1 determination on appeal. In the circumstances of this case, any disclosure of classified 2 information to plaintiffs' counsel, even under seemingly secure terms and conditions, would 3 abrogate the state secrets privilege, and thus none of the terms of the proposed order would 4 be consistent with the law or sufficient to protect the Government's national security 5 interests in the circumstances of this case.

6 In addition, the Government rejects plaintiffs' contention below that it has failed to 7 comply with the April 17 Order itself. The Government conferred with the plaintiffs 8 regarding all of the foregoing issues (and other issues). Indeed, at the conclusion of that 9 conferral, it appeared to the Government that plaintiffs' counsel regarded the conversation 10 as candid and comprehensive. In addition, the Government has set forth its position on the 11 terms of the proposed order at length in this joint document, as required by the Court. The 12 Court's Order did not compel the Government to consent to terms of a protective order to 13 which it does not agree, and we have specifically stated and explained at length in this 14 submission that, in light of the Government's fundamental objection to access by plaintiffs' 15 counsel to classified information, there are no specific terms of a protective order that would 16 protect the Government's interests in the circumstances of this case. In light of the parties' 17 continuing dispute over whether any classified information may be disclosed to plaintiffs' 18 counsel in the first place, the Government has complied with the April 17 Order to the 19 greatest extent it could.

20 In addition, we do not consider it "vexatious," as plaintiffs contend below, for the 21 Government to hold to its position (well supported by the law in our view) against the 22 disclosure of classified national security information that would negate a successful state 23 secrets privilege assertion before appellate review—particularly where the Court has not 24 yet directly ordered such a disclosure. Finally, we disagree with plaintiffs' suggestion 25 below that the Court may simply decide whether or not the plaintiffs have standing—a 26 disclosure expressly foreclosed by the Ninth Circuit's ruling on the state secrets 27 privilege—before any further appeal.

2 CONCLUSION

3 The Government respectfully does not consent to the disclosure of classified 4 information subject to the Government's successful assertion of the state secrets privilege to 5 the plaintiffs' counsel in this case. For the reasons set forth above, the Government objects 6 to the entry of plaintiffs' proposed protective order, and opposes any protective order under 7 which plaintiffs' counsel would have access to classified information. The Government 8 also respectfully requests that, before the Court grants plaintiffs' counsel access to classified

Attorneys for the Government Defendants

III. PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

INTRODUCTION

On April 23, 2009, plaintiffs' counsel, following the Court's directive in its order of April 17, 2009, sent government counsel a draft protective order based on protective orders used in the Guantanamo Bay litigation. On May 12, 2009, the parties conferred as required by the Court. Regrettably, but perhaps not surprisingly, during that conference the government attorneys repeated various arguments that this Court has already rejected, insisting that this Court lacks authority to issue or proceed under any protective order. Government counsel's intransigent positions are reiterated above in the "Government Defendants' Opposition To Protective Order," which government counsel delivered to plaintiffs' counsel on the evening of May 14, 2009.

It is as if this Court's orders of January 5, February 13, and April 17, 2009, never happened. Defendants continue to argue that FISA does not preempt the state secrets privilege – despite defendants' failed attempts to obtain appellate review of this Court's ruling on that issue. Defendants continue to insist that the Court cannot proceed with this litigation and give plaintiffs' counsel access to classified information upon the Court's determination that, as a matter of due process, plaintiffs' counsel have a "need to know" that information – despite the Court's determination to proceed. And defendants continue to posit what this Court has called "similar-sounding alternatives all of which appear geared toward obtaining a stay of this court's proceedings and review by the court of appeals," Order of April 17, 2009 [Dkt. 84] at 1-2 – despite defendants' previous failed attempts to obtain a stay and appellate review.

It is plaintiffs' position that this Court need not revisit its previous rulings and determination to proceed, and thus it is not necessary for plaintiffs to respond to defendants' recycled arguments on FISA preemption, access to classified information, and the "need to know" determination. In responding to the government's positions as set forth above, plaintiffs will look forward, not backward, and simply provide a discussion and analysis that

1 will assist the Court to enable this case to “resume forward progress.” Order of April 17, 2 2009 [Dkt. 84] at 3.

3 DISCUSSION

4 A. DEFENDANTS CANNOT CREATE APPELLATE JURISDICTION BY 5 STIPULATION OR MANIPULATION.

6 Defendants continue their previously-failed efforts to invoke the appellate process
7 and thereby thwart this Court’s efforts to resume forward progress in this case. Defendants 8 have now concocted two schemes for creating appellate jurisdiction, both of which this 9 Court should reject.

10 The first scheme made its appearance during the May 12 conference, when defense 11 counsel asked plaintiffs’ counsel to agree that defendants may immediately appeal if this 12 Court issues a protective order enabling the litigation to go forward. This scheme must fail 13 for the simple reason that appellate jurisdiction cannot be created by stipulation of the 14 parties. See, e.g., Smith v. Salish Kootenai College, 434 F.3d 1127, 1137 (9th Cir. 2006); 15 American States Ins. Co. v. Dastar Corp., 318 F.3d 881, 885 (9th Cir. 2003); U.S. v. Ceja- 16 Prado, 333 F.3d 1046, 1049 (9th Cir. 2003).

17 The second scheme appears above, in the “Government Defendants’ Opposition To 18 Protective Order,” where defendants ask this Court to “enter an order directing disclosure” 19 so as to create appellate jurisdiction under 50 U.S.C. section 1806(h), which prescribes 20 finality of an order directing disclosure of materials relating to surveillance. The problem 21 with this scheme is that plaintiffs are not requesting, and this Court need not grant, an “order 22 directing disclosure” by defendants. For this case to resume forward progress, the Court can 23 simply adopt a protective order under which the Court will afford plaintiffs access to the 24 classified filings, the most of important of which – the Sealed Document – has already been 25 disclosed to plaintiffs. No “order directing disclosure” is necessary. By seeking an “order 26 directing disclosure,” defendants are attempting to create appellate jurisdiction by 27 manipulating this Court into the language of section 1806(h). That, too, is improper. “A 28

1 party may not engage in manipulation either to create appellate jurisdiction or to prevent it.”
2 American States Ins. Co., 318 F.3d at 885.

3 B. DEFENDANTS’ OBJECTIONS TO PORTIONS OF PLAINTIFFS’
4 PROPOSED PROTECTIVE ORDER ARE MERITLESS.

5 During the May 12 conference, the parties discussed the terms of the draft protective 6 order that plaintiffs’ counsel submitted to defense counsel on April 23. Thereafter, 7 plaintiffs’ counsel made substantial changes to their draft order to accommodate many of 8 the government’s concerns. Plaintiffs’ revised proposed protective order is set forth at the 9 outset of this Joint Submission.

10 Despite the changes that plaintiffs’ counsel have made, defendants still object to 11 selected portions of the revised proposed protective order. Plaintiffs address those 12 objections as follows:

13 Paragraph 32(a): This paragraph addresses classified filings by defendants. It is 14 modeled on paragraph 49(a) of Guantanamo Order, Dkt. 1481. Paragraph 32(a) of the 15 proposed order is a near-verbatim restatement of paragraph 49(a) of the Guantanamo Order.

16 Paragraph 49(b) of the Guantanamo Order, which is omitted from plaintiffs’ 17 proposed protective order, states as follows:

18 Nothing herein requires the government to disclose classified information.
19 Additionally, nothing herein prohibits the government from submitting 20 classified information to the Court in camera or ex parte in these proceedings 21 or entitles petitioners or petitioner’s counsel access to such submissions or 22 information. Except for good cause shown in the filing, the government shall 23 provide petitioner’s counsel or petitioners with notice served on petitioner’s 24 counsel on the date of filing.

25 This Court has now determined that plaintiffs, through their attorneys, must be allowed to 26 fully participate in the litigation of the important issues presented by this case. Further, two 27 of plaintiffs’ attorneys have now been granted favorable security clearance eligibility 28 determinations. (We note, however, that despite this Court’s order for the government to process the security clearance applications by February 13, 2009, defendants still have not made a determination on a third attorney’s application.) Those events have made further ex

1 parte filings inappropriate. The omission of the above-quoted language from the proposed 2 protective order puts an end to such ex parte filings.

3 The government asserts that “[e]limination of this provision would further foreclose 4 the Government’s authority to control the use and disclosure of classified information in this 5 case.” (Joint Submission, p. 22). If control means forcing this Court to accept filings to 6 which plaintiffs cannot respond, then it is indeed true that the proposed protective order 7 limits the government’s authority, and rightfully so. Defendants remain free, however, to 8 decide not to submit such classified information. If defendants do submit such information, 9 it will protected by the terms of the protective order prohibiting any public disclosure of the 10 information.

11 Paragraph 25: This paragraph is modeled on paragraph 28 of the Guantanamo 12 Order. Both orders create a presumption that plaintiffs’ counsel have a “need to know” 13 information in the government’s possession concerning the plaintiffs whom that counsel 14 represent. The government objects to this presumption. Plainly, however, if plaintiffs’ 15 counsel are to meaningfully represent their clients in this litigation, they must have access to 16 classified information regarding their clients that is relevant to the issues presented in the 17 case.

18 The Guantanamo Order also eliminates the presumption to the extent the government 19 seeks to “withhold from a petitioner’s counsel highly sensitive information or information 20 concerning a highly sensitive source that the government represents to the Court ex parte and 21 in camera.” In proposed paragraph 25, plaintiffs delete that provision. Rather than allow the 22 government to decide whether to withhold relevant information, the draft Protective Order 23 instead allows government counsel to challenge the need-to-know presumption on a case-by-24 case basis “for good cause shown.” Thus the proposed protective order preserves the 25 government’s right to challenge the need-to-know presumption, but the decision whether to 26 withhold information is ultimately left to the Court, to be exercised under the Court’s 27 authority as described in Plaintiffs’ Supplemental Case Management Statement [Dkt. 72].
28

1 Paragraph 28: Defendants object to the reference in paragraph 28 to the Ninth 2 Circuit's recent opinion in Mohamed v. Jeppesen Dataplan. Plaintiffs have included that 3 reference, however, because of the numerous relevant public disclosures by the government 4 and by the news media about the TSP and the plaintiffs' surveillance – before this case was 5 filed and during the course of the litigation – much of which is no longer secret. For 6 example, the very existence of the TSP, which was classified, was initially disclosed by the 7 New York Times in December 2005. Ultimately, President Bush declassified the existence of 8 the program and discussed it in public. However, between the time of the New York Times
9 article and the declassification and disclosure by the President, that information was no 10 longer secret. Under the terms of paragraph 28 of this Order, plaintiffs' counsel would have 11 been allowed to discuss and use that information after it was no longer secret but before it 12 was declassified. This approach is consistent with the Ninth Circuit's holding in Mohamed v.
13 Jeppesen Dataplan that the state secrets privilege does not protect classified information that 14 has become non-secret due to its public disclosure. See 2009 WL 1119516 ("The 15 government could not seriously argue, for example, that the Pentagon Papers remained 16 'secret' and therefore subject to the state secrets privilege even after having been published 17 in the New York Times, simply because the government itself refused to declassify or 18 otherwise 'officially disclose' the content of the papers.").

19 Paragraphs 30 and 31: Defendants object to these paragraphs to the extent they 20 allow plaintiffs' counsel to determine whether information is classified and thus may not be 21 filed on the public record. But it will be obvious to plaintiffs whether documents are 22 classified, because such documents are always clearly marked with that designation.
23 Plaintiffs also understand that any briefs or other documents they file that include or refer to 24 information from a classified document are classified. In any event, the government's 25 objection can be met by revising paragraph 30 to read as follows: "Pending further order of 26 the Court, any pleadings or other documents filed by plaintiffs that do not contain classified 27 information are authorized for direct filing in the CM/ECF system consistent with the regular 28 electronic filing practices of the Court."

1 Plaintiffs filings with the Ninth Circuit were made under exactly the same procedures
2 as those set forth in paragraph 30 and 31. The government has never alleged that plaintiffs' 3 counsel made any public filing in that court which included classified information.

4 Paragraphs 16-23: The government takes the position that it is unnecessary at this 5 time to work out the details of how plaintiffs' counsel will have access to the secure area.
6 Plaintiffs believe that this is an essential part of the protective order and that there is no
7 reason not to resolve these issues at this time to avoid further delays. The language plaintiffs 8 propose for paragraphs 16 through 23 regarding access to the secure area and use of 9 computers is reasonable and should be incorporated in the protective order.

10 Paragraph 29: The Guantanamo Order provided that upon completion of the 11 litigation, all classified filings would be destroyed. In the present case, such a provision 12 could be problematic for other related cases and the historical record regarding this litigation.
13 Therefore plaintiffs propose in paragraph 29 that one copy of all filings be retained by the 14 government.

15 C. DEFENDANTS HAVE FAILED TO COMPLY WITH THIS COURT'S 16 ORDER OF APRIL 17, 2009.

17 In the order of April 17, 2009, this Court ordered that, if the parties are unable to 18 agree on all terms of a protective order, "they shall jointly submit a document containing all 19 agreed terms," along with an explanation of "the terms about which they are unable to reach 20 agreement." Order of April 17, 2009 [Dkt. 84] at 2. Defendants, however, have refused to 21 agree to any terms of a protective order, choosing instead to merely snipe at some of the 22 provisions in plaintiffs' proposed protective order. Defendants have refused to agree to a 23 single word in plaintiffs' proposed protective order – not even "a," "and" or "the." And 24 defendants have refused to propose their own protective order. This is hardly what was 25 envisioned by the Court's order of April 17 – the joint submission of a document containing 26 all agreed terms of a protective order, even if only partial. Defendants have utterly failed to 27 comply with – indeed, have defied – the April 17 directive.
28

1 In plaintiffs' view, given defendants' recalcitrance, any one of three options would be 2 appropriate for resuming forward progress in this case. The first option is for the Court to 3 adopt plaintiffs' proposed protective order with modifications as the Court deems 4 appropriate.

5 The second option is one that plaintiffs have previously proposed – that the Court 6 simply proceed to determine that plaintiffs were subjected to warrantless electronic 7 surveillance and thus have standing to prosecute this action. Now that the Court has 8 reviewed the Sealed Document, and in consideration of plaintiffs' previous arguments on 9 how the unclassified and classified evidence demonstrates plaintiffs' standing, this Court is 10 sufficiently well-positioned to find standing.

11 The third option is for the Court to render a default judgment because of defendants' 12 persistent refusals to comply with the Court's orders of January 5 and April 17, 2009. See 13 Estrada v. Speno & Cohen, 244 F.3d 1050, 1055 (9th Cir. 2001) (judge can order default 14 judgment against a party for "vexatious litigation tactics"). That approach would establish 15 liability, with damages and other relief to be determined in a subsequent evidentiary 16 proceeding. See DirecTV, Inc. v. Huhnh, 503 F.3d 847, 851 (9th Cir. 2007); Greyhound
17 Exhibitgroup, Inc., 973 F.2d 155, 158 (2d Cir. 1992); Benny v. Pipes, 799 F.2d 489, 495 (9th 18 Cir. 1986).

19 CONCLUSION

20 This case has now dragged on for more than three years, with the litigation of 21 standing only now in sight. The Court has rightly determined that forward progress should 22 resume. Plaintiffs have obeyed the Court's April 17 directive and have proposed a protective 23 order that will facilitate the litigation of the important issues in this case in a way that 24 achieves an appropriate balance between plaintiffs' due process rights and the government's 25 important concerns about national security. Defendants have not obeyed the Court's 26 directive. Plaintiffs' counsel have done their best to confer with the government attorneys, 27 but meaningful dialogue is difficult when one party refuses to budge from long-held and 28 repeatedly rejected positions. Without the government's cooperation, it is left to this Court to determine how this case may resume forward progress.
